Instead, the Scheduling Order recites that the Court will set a Pre-Trial Conference no later than 30 days after ruling on dispositive motions. The parties do not request a change to this provision of the Scheduling Order.

Good cause exists for continuing the discovery and motion dates as the Parties are actively negotiating a settlement of all claims in this action. At this time, the Parties believe they are close to reaching a settlement, and expect to finalize their settlement of this action, or to conclude that settlement will not occur, within sixty (60) days. To promote settlement, the Parties have not spent their resources or burdened each other with discovery requests. The Parties have not sought any other such continuances from the Court.
